

As part of the BBC School News Report, our team at The King's School were involved in 'News day' on Thursday, 16th March.

The BBC School News Report day is a well-publicised, world-wide event, which gives pupils the opportunity to learn more about the world of journalism, produce and present their own news stories and experience working in teams under pressure.

The day was particularly successful, as the students featured in their own news bulletins and successfully edited the material for a 2pm deadline.

The content can be seen at <http://kings.wakefield.sch.uk/bbcnewsschoolreport>

Here is what some of our members said:

"I have really enjoyed being a part of the BBC News team at King's. I have gained valuable experience of working to strict deadlines and most importantly, I have had fun with my friends!" - Marissa Preston (Y7)

"I had fun reporting as a presenter and taking professional photographs. I would recommend this club to anyone who is looking to get involved in a new activity." - Francesa Dews (Y7)

"I got to write news articles about any topic of my choice, for example - Prince William 'dad dancing' and festival fashion!" - Georgia Atkinson (Y8)

"I feel like I have really developed my confidence and I have enjoyed working with students from other years." - Navay Kaur (Y8)

"It has been an educational and interesting experience. I would definitely recommend the BBC School News Report club to other pupils." - Thomas Shorthouse (Y8)

"I gathered a very useful insight in to the world of journalism by being a part of the BBC School News Report team." - Max Hookham (Y10)

The BBC School News Report team meet every Monday lunch time in M9, as an extra-curricular activity. Currently, we have eighteen members and students of all age groups are welcome.